

GENDER LINKS
FOR EQUALITY AND JUSTICE

A leading Southern African NGO that is working from local, to national to regional level, with strong African and global links, to give women equal voice, choice and control by 2030!

WHO WE ARE

Formed in March 2001, Gender Links (GL) is a Southern African NGO, headquartered in Johannesburg, South Africa, that promotes gender equality and justice across the fifteen countries of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) region. GL is committed to an inclusive, equal and just society in the public and private space in accordance with the SADC Protocol on Gender and Development. GL's Vision 2020 is of:

- An independent, strong, vibrant, principled self-sustaining organisation guiding Southern Africa to a free, democratic region based on equity for all.
- A voice of the voiceless, especially women who constitute the majority of those globally who are denied a voice.
- A leading African NGO and globally renowned centre of excellence on gender.
- An organisation with deeper roots.
- An organisation with two wings: one not for profit and the other generating income to help sustain the organisation.

WHY WE EXIST

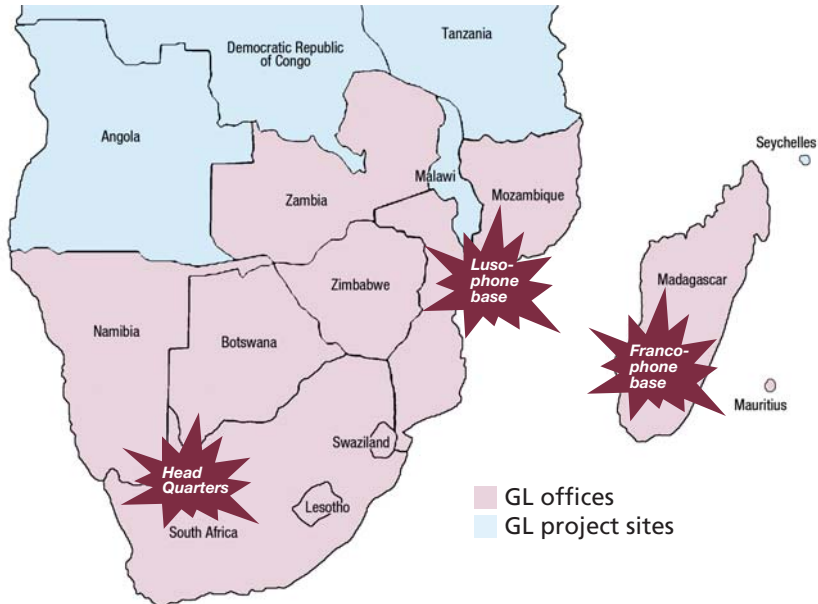

GL's Theory of Change recognises that gender is the most cross-cutting of all forms of inequality and exclusion. Reinforced in formal and informal ways, gender inequality begins in the home; is perpetuated by the family; schools; work place; community, custom, culture, religion and tradition as well structures within society more broadly - the media, new media, popular culture, advertising, laws, law enforcement agencies, the judiciary and state. While society readily identifies other forms of inequality, gender discrimination is so normalised that it often goes unnoticed, including by women who have been socialised to accept their inferior status. Gender inequality follows the life cycle of most women from cradle to grave. Despite changes in laws and Constitutions, many women remain minors all their lives - under their fathers, husbands, even sons, and as widows subject to male relatives. Women and girls in Southern Africa remain the majority of the poor; the dispossessed; the unemployed; the voiceless; those whose rights and dignity are daily violated and denied; those infected and affected by HIV and AIDS.

WHERE WE WORK

Gender Links has offices in ten registered SADC countries, including a Lusophone base in Mozambique and Francophone base in Madagascar. GL's Botswana office also serves as a liaison office with the Southern African Development Community (SADC).

PROGRAMME OF ACTION

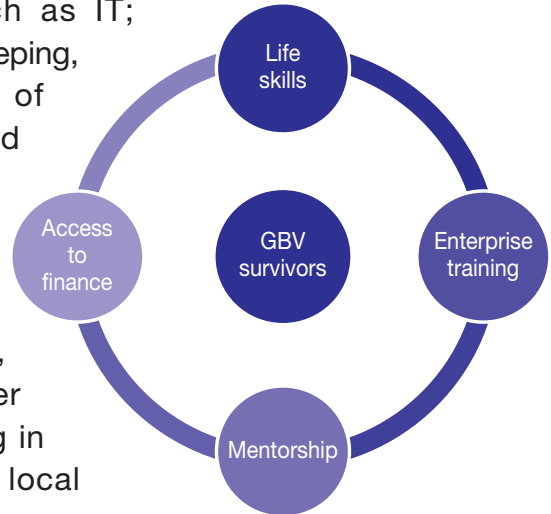

WHAT WE DO

At the policy level, GL coordinates the Southern African Gender Protocol Alliance that campaigned for the adoption of this unique instrument in 2008. Originally aligned to the Millennium Development Goals, the Protocol brings together global and international commitments to gender equality. In 2016, the Protocol was aligned to the Sustainable Development Goals. GL and 25 partners produce an annual Barometer tracking progress towards attaining gender equality in SADC. GL integrates the targets of the Protocol into its cutting edge work on gender and the media that includes research, monitoring and on-the-job training of journalists. GL also uses the media to get information to a wide variety of audiences. In its gender and governance work GL spearheads the 50/50 campaign in the region, with a special focus on local government where GL works with councils in ten countries on gender responsive budgeting and service delivery, with new areas like Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights as well as Climate Change enriching this model. Pioneering work on the Sixteen Days of Activism campaign in the gender justice programme has expanded to include 365 day action plans to end gender violence; gender prevalence and attitude surveys in seven countries; and ground-breaking work on ending violence and empowering women: community by community.

Ending Violence Empowering Women

This life skills and entrepreneurship programme for women that have experienced gender based violence has been run in 101 councils in 10 SADC countries and has helped 1350 survivors of gender violence reclaim their lives. The programme focuses on a combination of:

- Life skills training including confidence building; writing; public speaking and decision making and understanding gender as a social construct.
- Business skills development such as IT; marketing, market research, record keeping, financial management, developing of business plans, applying for tenders and accessing finance.
- Networking has been introduced as a means of identifying potential support arrangements such as mentorship, for sourcing business opportunities, developing relationships with other businesses in their areas or working in collective to access tenders from local government with local partners.

Working with local councils

Key to the success of the project is the link to local councils that form part of GL's Centres of Excellence for Gender in Local Government. In South African 11 councils in three provinces - Limpopo, Gauteng and Western Cape - participated in the pilot project from 2013 to 2015. These include Bitou, Blouberg, Cape Agulhas, Emfuleni, George, Mazikama, Midvaal, Mossel Bay, Phalaborwa, Vhembe and Witzenberg. The council's worked with GL to identify women to work with that had sought support services for GBV from council programmes. This anchored the programme within an existing structure and provided additional support for participants. Council's linked the Empower Women, End Violence programme in existing programmes. This resulted in clearer understanding and strategy around ending GBV and the economic empowerment of women; including their integration into SMME programmes with local government. This unique model has had several benefits; the potential for long term sustainability of the project, ongoing monitoring and support of the women and enhancing local governments work in economic mainstreaming. One of the key expectations is that the competence of the participants will grow though mentorship for increase their eligibility for tenders with the councils and even the private sector.

Making a difference

Key results of the pilot project in South Africa include:

- 72% grew their businesses and added new products
- 79% completed a business plan; 54% followed through on the plan
- 69% found new markets.
- 65% opened a bank account.
- The average increase in income per month rose from a negative position to R532.
- 74% indicated experiencing less or much less gender based violence.

Participants were able to run businesses more effectively: “I have learned about marketing, pricing and to have good relationship with my customers. Now I provide my children with all their needs and spoil myself. I used to sell food on the street but now I am doing safety and security services. I was a victim of violence and abuse from my partner and he always shouted at me. Now he has changed and things are not hard like before. I have employed two women in my business. My business is still small but I can now take care of my children. Women must change, be recognised and be independent.”

Making IT work for gender justice

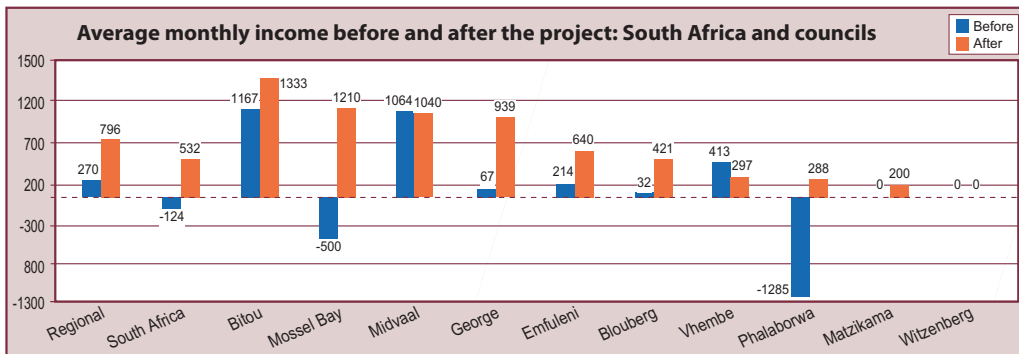

68% of the South African participants now have E Mail (compared to 26% at the start); 67% use a computer (compared to 31% at the start); 29% surf the Internet (compared to 27% at the start); 12% have a twitter account (compared to 7% at the start) and 6% have a website or space on a website (compared to 2% at the start).

Improved earnings

Across the region, earnings of women who participated in the project rose by 66% and by 123% in South Africa. The average income per month for South African participants rose from a negative position to R532 per month.

“Since doing the Gender Links training I can now sit down with my husband, talk about any issue and he does not get angry like he used to. The family is happy that I persevered through difficulties and they have learned from my new way of dealing with problems; to talk to people and not bottle problems inside. I am managing to raise my children with my small business and also I am proud of the person I have become. My training has also given me the confidence to help others. I created a support group where woman share their problems and give each other advice of how to work through their problems.”

Vuyela Khomo from Blouberg*

Voice, choice and control

In the first fifteen years GL reached over 120,000 direct beneficiaries. In an analysis of the Drivers of Change, 65% of women said they had become more aware of their rights; an even higher percentage (73%) said they now had greater confidence; 52% said they could claim their rights and 49% had improved their self-image.

Susan Swart from Cape Agulhas, South Africa, took the microphone with confidence at the SADC Gender Protocol@Work Summit and declared: "I overcame, so can you!" Her emotional anguish of living with an abusive husband finally surfaced after her husband decided she was not good enough anymore and left her and her two kids to fend for themselves. She thought long and hard about the business ventures she could pursue. She registered a catering business and started with a donated chip making machine. In 2013, Susan attended the GL entrepreneurship training programme for survivors of gender violence and said that since then she has never looked back. As she put it: "GL taught me how to fly. I was encouraged to encourage others and was empowered to empower myself. I want to tell everyone that they can overcome, just like I have. My business is still growing and I know it will keep growing. Gender links has provided me with the platform and the freedom to be the best that I can."

“I write to express my support for the work by Gender Links to enhance the status of women in the SADC region generally, and in particular their pioneering work on the economic empowerment of survivors of gender violence. I was privileged last year to be a key note speaker at a breakfast meeting to share initial results of the Empower Women, End Violence project in South Africa. I heard at first hand survivors talk about how violence had eroded their sense of self-worth, and conversely how this project had helped them to regain their confidence. I should add that over the last year the AfDB has made use of GL Training through its GL Services arm. During 2015, GL provided gender training for my team, operational and non-operational staff in French and English, in South Africa and Abidjan. GL provided a professional service with an inspirational quality that has given us the jump start we needed at the AfDB for our gender mainstreaming efforts. Much of this is due to the hands on examples and experience from the field that GL staff bring to their work. GL hosted the Johannesburg training at the GL Cottages, part of GL's sustainability efforts reflecting the deliberate efforts not to be totally reliant on donor funds. We were very pleased with the customer service, spirit of enterprise and purpose that characterise GL and all its units.” - Geraldine Fraser Moleketi, Special Envoy on Gender to the African Development Bank
