Botshabelo	Omphithetse	Private	okbotsha@gmail.com	Under sexual health reproduction I suggest that training must be extended to all professionals (health, police, social and community development etc) who deal with GBV cases. Please do not forget the boy-child in all these initiatives lest we create another gap which will come with its own burdens. in	Botswana

				the future. I am saying this because as an educator I have made an observation that we have somehow left behind the boy-child behind in empowerment initiatives and this has created other issues such as low academic performance and indiscipline. Just an example, recently my 9year-old son asked me whats in it for them because the girls at their school were given SKY something magazine and there was nothing for them. Politics – is it not possible to groom them from grassroots eg lately we see SRCs at secondary schools led by girls. I think trying to empower in late stages has its own disadvantages. Lets try platforms to empower women for political office at the earliest time of interest such as at secondary or tertiary. Inheritance – all gaps should be closed to stop relatives from protesting inheritance from their married sons upon death. I feel that this subjects the married women to abuse and has the potential to cause mental health issues in the long term and other harmful diseases such as High Blood Pressure etc If possible, All single parent families headed by men and women who do not have sources of income should somehow be supported financially.

Charumbira	Chaha	Gaborone North Ward Development Committee	charumbirachaha@gmail.com	With respect to GBV, counselling should be mandatory for known perpetrators especially in intimate partner relationships because it is not unusual for victims in such instances to withdraw the charges against their partners, which subjects the women to a vicious cycle of abuse and cases go untried . With counselling, the perpetrators may have some behavioural change effected.	Botswana

Kgosi	Boikanyo	Debswana Diamond Company	ms_bk79@icloud.com	I totally support the recommendations which would further force the recent bills/acts on Citizen economic inclusion to be intentional on numbers and targeted progress to be made towards inclusion of women and closing the parity gap in such. If we are to close the gap in ensuring women participate equally in economic development, growth and prosperity all these laws should complement one another.	Botswana

Legwaila	Marty	Private	makhubum@gmail.com	I endorse the presentation. It has covered the issues of women. I, however, feel that issues that affect Widows should have been dealt with in depth. There are many Widows who now live as puppers after the death of their spouses as some in laws take the property that the Widows accumulated with their husbands There is now a registered Society called Widows Walking Together Society of Botswana. Members would be willing to write on the issues that affect Widows in Botswana	Botswana

Mannathoko	Changu	Self	changu.mannathoko@gmail.com	I wholeheartedly endorse this well thought-out, well written and well-argued submission. Well Done! I applaud the holistic and context specific approach of the submission. This is demonstrated in the recommendations calling for Equality and Non-Discrimination and Standalone Provisions on Women's Rights. This holistic approach enabled the submission to address the political, social and economic rights of women, girls and LGBTI persons in our country. The submission demonstrates how gender-based discrimination permeates all structures and institutions in society at micro, meso and macro-levels. Hence the submission's recommendations cover political, economic and social aspects of gender equality.	Botswana
