

JOIN US AS WE KICK OFF 16 DAYS OF REAL ACTIVISM WITH:

A MARCH TO PARLIAMENT

27 November 2014
10:00 AM

Starting point: Keizergracht

In South Africa, where more than a thousand women are killed every year by an intimate partner, where as many as a million rapes occur per year, civil society is ramping up our campaign to tell our government to stop paying empty lip service to gender-based violence, and to urgently develop and implement a comprehensive and fully funded national strategic plan to prevent, combat and respond to GBV.

WE DEMAND A NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN TO END GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE.

#NSPnow

NO
MORE EMPTY
PROMISES

During 16 Days of Activism, we tell Minister Shabangu, President Zuma and all of government that we are angry that earlier efforts (and promises) to develop a national plan to combat GBV have been put on hold, and that the National Council on GBV has been suspended, without any clear direction on who will now lead a national effort to address gender-based violence in South Africa, and the national plan continuously being shortchanged and sidelined.

Join us in our call to government to develop a national plan now! Tell our government that when it comes to GBV, South Africans want service delivery, not lip service.

For more information, please contact Vuyiseka Dubula at vuyiseka@genderjustice.org.za or 076 492 6216

